THE SENIOR CLASS

of The

MARY POTTER ACADEMY

Oxford, North Carolina

Presents

THE RAM

Volume III

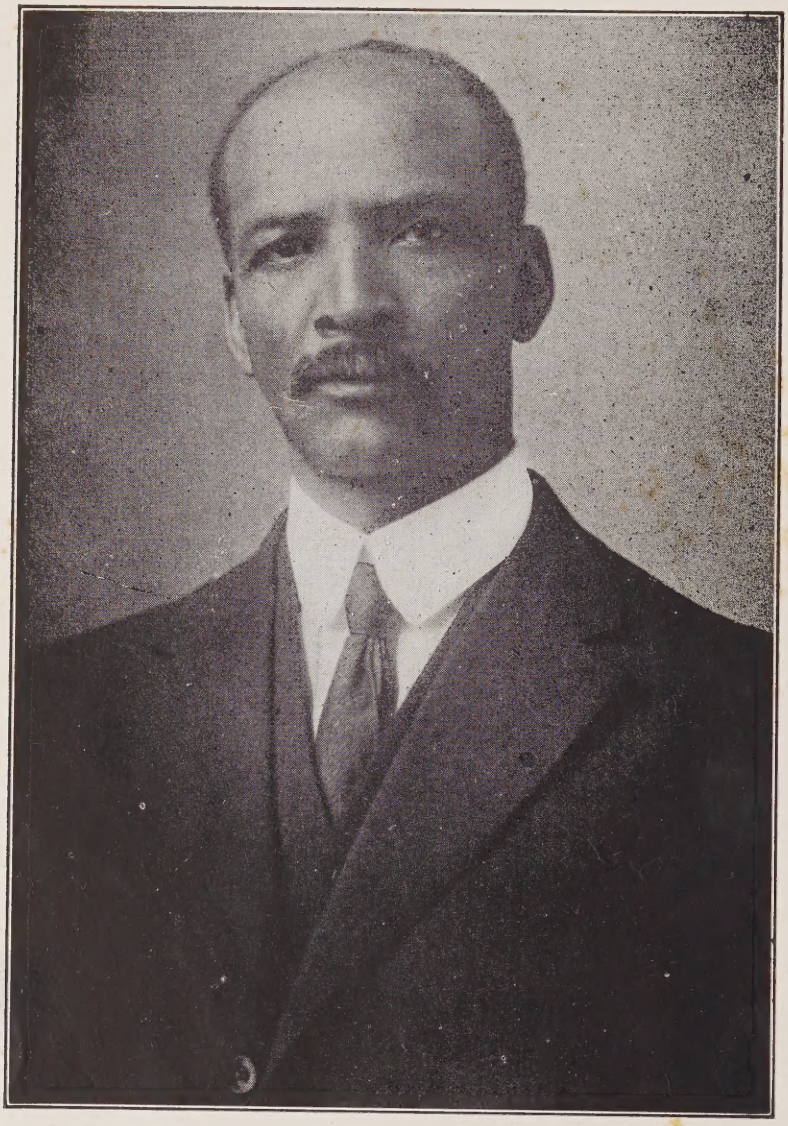
1948

Dedication

To one who has unselfishly devoted her life in rendering service to the many students who have completed and are completing a minor cornerstone in their education, we, the Senior Class of '48 do dedicate this, the third edition of the Ram, to Miss Delilah E. Peace, who has served on the faculty for a great number of years. We sincerely hope that this tribute will serve as a memorandum to her for the inspiration she has given so many individuals.

Our Founder

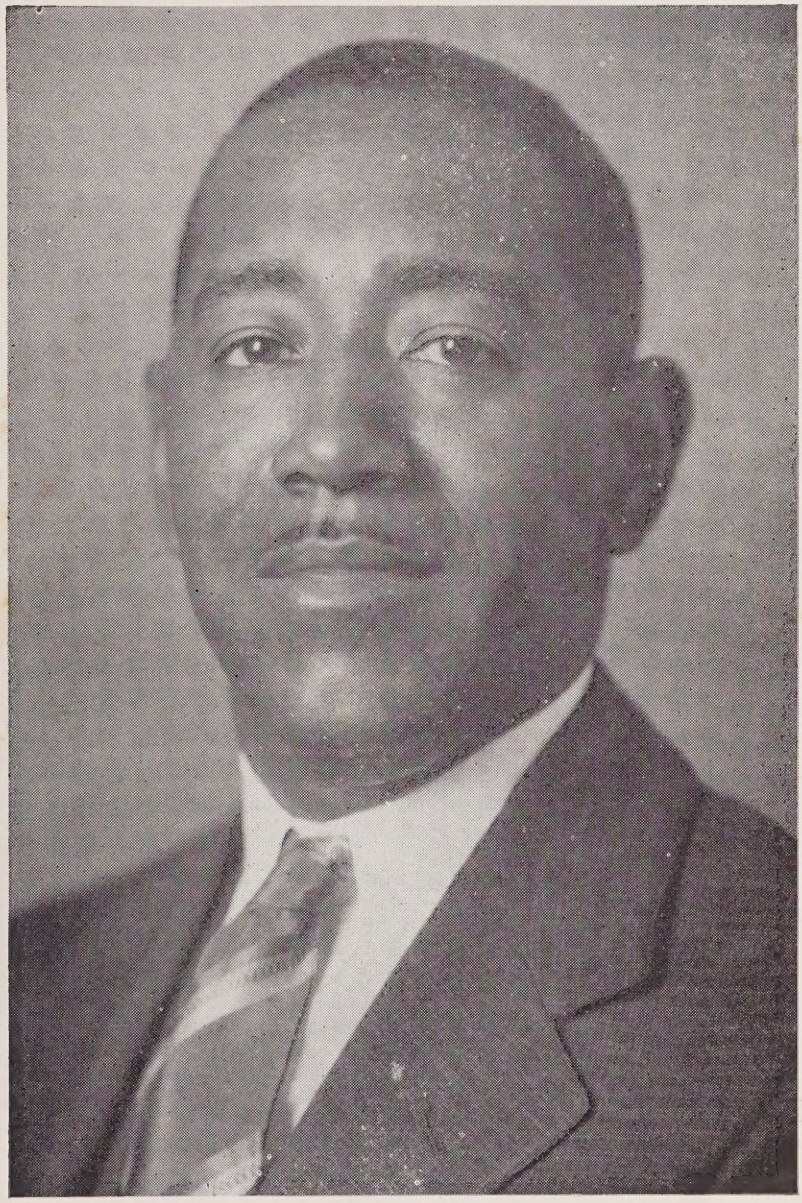
Dr. G. C. Shaw



The good that you have done will always live in the hearts of the boys and girls who go out from this great institution of learning, which was founded by your keen insight of human needs. We will never forget that it was you who first blazed the trail to our paths for success.

Our Principal

Rev. H. S. Davis, D. D.



Long will we remember those ideals which you have striven so hard to instill within us. Your inspiration and the knowledge we have gained here will be before us always, guiding us toward our goals and success.

SENIOR

MRS. R. E. HOWELL

Class History

The history of the class of 1948 is colorful and dramatic. In the year 1944, a group of green, enthusiastic youngsters entered the high school department of Mary Potter School. Although we were inexperienced, we were ready to grasp the fundamentals that would enable us to play a vital part in the activities of the school.

The very first day, the villain, Study, made its appearance. At first, he interfered with the enjoyment and leisure of the freshmen, but soon we were able to make proper adjustments. By so doing, we were fortunate enough to be represented in all extra-curricular activities of the school. The Rogers brothers became members of the varsity basketball team. Barnetta McGhee and several others became outstanding members of the Glee Club and Chorus, and a great number of us maintained an average of B and above for the entire year.

So ended a prosperous year for the amateurs, and after an intermission of twelve weeks, we returned to resume our studies. We seemed to have achieved a charm, an ease of manner and a feeling of security that was noticeably lacking in our freshman year. Incipient love affairs were noticed and the costumes were much more elaborate, as was the make-up used.

Again we were very active, and many more of us became members of the Glee Club, the patrol force, the Y-Teens, and the Hi-Y. We spent more time than before in preparation against our enemy —Study— and the preparation was more systematic. By the end of the year, most of us had mastered our courses and passed our exams, even though some of our answers to the deadly questions were humorously absurd and beside the point. Nevertheless, we were again the winners.

After another twelve weeks intermission, we staggered in for a third time. This time we were so changed that we seemed like entirely new persons, but we were the same, I assure you. We were the "Honorable Juniors." Our position and our pride both had advanced, but there remained the haunting dread of Study, the villain. However, we buckled down and worked harder. Amidst our struggles were many delightful interludes to make the year a delightful one. There were a number of interesting and exciting games in which our teams were the winners; there were educational programs, and best of all, there was the Junior and Senior Prom.

By this time, too, many more of us had come more prominently into the spotlight. Barnetta McGhee and Lester Greenwood, who were made members of the Dramatic Club were main characters in two of the best plays of the school year. Donnell Rogers was Ace player of the basketball team. Sterlon Hawkins and Lawrence Collins were outstanding players, and Olivette Merrick had the honor of becoming a member of the Mary Potter Trio.

As is natural in life, other unexpected things happened. Many who came in the first year with enthusiasm and high hopes wearied of the struggle and left the cast in search of positions offering speedy remuneration and less brain fog. We missed them, but realized that they were entirely justified in their withdrawal.

Again an intermission of twelve weeks which we greatly enjoyed. Perhaps, because we realized there was but one more year to follow. This year's arrival was warmly received. There was an atmosphere of gayety that even the thought of study could not completely dispel. By this time we, now the "Dignified Seniors," were so matured, so at ease, so changed for the better that we were difficult to recognize. And even that arch-villain, Study, seemed less formidable. We were certainly on much more familiar terms with him now than we had been before.

Those of us who showed promise of being stars in the preceding years fulfilled that promise and now we shine brightly. Many of us are honor students, having maintained an average of B and above throughout the years; many have won fame this year in other activities of the school. The Rogers brothers maintained their standings as Ace players on the basketball team; four of the senior girls made first team this year, and Katie Harris and Katie McQueen were outstanding members of the team. Sterlon Hawkins had a great honor bestowed upon him when he received the basketball medal for being the best all-round player of the entire tournament. He was also chosen as a member of the Conference Team of the year. The following six pupils carry the highest averages for the four-year period: Bessye Lawrence, Vernita Gregory, Gloria Thompson, Erma Clements, Ruby Smith and Corneida Davidson. Many others have been outstanding in one way or another.

Thus the curtains fall on this great play of four acts. We have been the actors, and we have enjoyed perfoming, for now, as we look back over the many fatal hours of our history when Final Examination raised his sinister head, we realize that the attack of the seniors was brave and well-organized. The result of concentration is apparent, and the seniors emerge victorious!

We journey on now, wiser and more confident that whatever we do and wherever we go success will be ours as long as we attack the foe.

—Lester Greenwood

Farewell

By Hughie Cameron

Four Years of Bliss at Mary Potter
Our one and only Alma Mater,
Four years of study, work and fun
And our diplomas we have won.

Morns when off to school we'd go
Plodding through sunshine, rain or snow,
Often when even feeling low
We were willing to learn, to advance, to know.

To get a treasure more valuable than gold,
Something to store, to always hold,
Something to always call our own,
Something to help us reach our goal.

To a place our hours were merriest
On our honor we've sworn to cherish,
So that our Alma Mater may live,
Our own and only life we'd give.

Never can we repay the faculty and principal
For a thing that is so invincible,
But we'll always rate them as the best
Forever remembering their patience and zest.

In our attempt to pay tribute
This our school we now salute;
Forever adoring our Alma Mater,
The one and only, Mary Potter.

Class Song

By Frances Olivette Merrick
Tune: "Now Is The Hour"

Farewell to thee
Our Alma Mater Dear,
Thanks for instruction
We received while here,
We hate to leave
For we love you so,
But duty calls us now
And we must go.

While we're away
We will remember you,
For you will guide us
Through our paths anew.
Daily we'll strive
To do that which is right,
For thy firm hand
Hath kept us in the light.

Straight from our hearts
Thanks for all you've done.
Some strifes are ours
And some victories won,
Soon we'll be gone,
But loyal we will be,
So Mary Potter Dear
Farewell to Thee!

Class Prophecy

I was stationed on Gold Coast, Africa, directing a company of moving picture stars. We were shooting a big super production on African Romance. The hero of the picture was the world's favorite, Lester Greenwood. I had been Lester's director for four years, and this production was to be our greatest achievement. As most of our work was done during the night, our days were usually free.

One morning as Lester and I were walking through a crowded street, we met Clarence Crews who was stationed on Gold Coast, Africa, doing missionary work. Clarence invited the two of us to go with him the next day to visit a friend, the name of whom he withheld. We consented to go and prepared for our journey.

Early the next morning, we started on our trip, a distance of forty-six miles to the adjoining village. We arrived about ten o'clock, tired, hot and dusty, and were greeted by none other than our own Monsie Hedgepeth, who was also doing missionary work. Our conversation was interesting. As usual, Monsie refused to let pleasure conflict with duty, so he compelled us to accompany him to an old African, a fortune teller. Monsie and Clarence did not pay any attention to the African but, somehow, he fascinated Lester and me. We began to observe closely his home, which, of course, was erected under a bamboo tree, and we found in one corner of the room a huge iron pot, containing a bunch of pine cones. When questioned, the old African informed us that if we burned the cones they would produce a picture of any one whom we wished to see. We eagerly seized this plan at once and burned the cones in hope of seeing what the other members of the class of '48 were doing. We purchased the cones and gathered around the fire. The African began to chant in a weird tone to himself.

"Whom shall we see first?" asked Monsie.

"Why Jacqueline Simpson, of course," replied Clarence.

I picked up the largest of the cones and dropped it into the flames. In the midst of the rising smoke, we beheld Jacqueline posing as a model in Hollywood. She was considered one of the best models of the time. As the picture faded, I dropped another cone into the fire and the scene changed to a harmonious one of beauty, color, ease and comfort, a perfect New York home. Presiding over the home was Frances Southerland, now the wife of one of America's greatest lawyers, Richard Peace, who owed most of his success to Frances. As we looked, Frances came into the room with four lovely children. We saw also Lewis Harvey, Ernest McKinnon, Janis Lawrence and Carnell Hicks. They were lawyers with offices next to Richard's.

The next cone carried us to Boston and there we found Piccola Spruill and Olivette Merrick. Piccola was teaching aesthetic dancing and Olivette was professor of vocal music in the Boston Conservatory.

As I placed the next cone into the fire, the group leaned forward with great expectation. The vision changed to a dining hall which was filled with girls, and lo! there stood stern-faced Barbara Motley, Dean of Bennett College, the leading girl's school in America. She had certainly not missed the position for which she had aspired.

Via the cone we journeyed to Jacksonville, Florida, and there we found Clarence Pettiford stationed as a merchant. Olivia Bullock was his private secretary. As we looked, another young lady came into the room, and when she turned around, we found her to be Mary Lou Alston. She was private secretary to Raleigh Graham.

As I dropped in the next cone, the vision changed. We found ourselves in Washington, D. C. at a teachers' convention, at which place we saw many of our classmates. We saw Inez Fields, Aurnette Hall, Catherine Hall, Ernestine Hobgood, Fannie Tharrington, Mollie Wimbush and Vernita Gregory. Vernita, of course, was giving a lecture.

As the picture faded, I dropped another cone and we beheld a new vision. We were now in New York City and there was Gerald Gore, directing one of the largest bands in America. We also found Petronia Allen, Cornelia Allen, Pattie Moore, Beatrice Wilson, Artina Davis, Willia Downey and Bernice Horton, each holding positions as private secretary for some prominent businessman.

The next cone carried us to Chicago and there we found a little Mary Potter at Chicago University. Mattie Parker was professor of matematics; Delores Dolson was assistant professor of English; Charles Burton, head of the agricultural department; Hughie Cameron, an art instructor; Eva Umstead, a teacher of physical culture; Barnetta McGhee, a dramatics teacher; Ethel Washington, Home Economics teacher; Mary Nutall, assistant Home Economics teacher; Bessye Lawrence, librarian of liberal arts department, and Bernice Cumbo as assistant librarian.

This picture faded and we were taken to a beautiful millinery shop in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. As we looked, two young ladies came in from the rear, and when they turned around we found them to be our classmates, Ella Cooper and Lavonia Fields. They were in the millinery business. In another shop on the same street Lois Saunders, Minnie Allen and Gertrude Baskerville were styling hair.

The next scene was in Trenton, New Jersey. There we found another group of our classmates holding positions in the Trenton High School—as teacher, Ruby Smith, and as Assistant Dean, Irene Johnson. Sterlon Hawkins and Alfred Gupton were instructors of physical education, along with Donnell Rogers. Helen Chavis was professor of French and Wilhelminia Tyler was professor of music.

The next picture made me shiver, for what I saw was Hodges Harper and Corneida Davidson performing an operation. Near them stood neatly dressed nurses who were Gloria Thompson, Katie Harris, Mattie Royster, Minerva Wortham, Bernice Brown, Gwendolyn Sturges and Laura Downey. The figure on the table turned over and smiled. We instantly recognized her as Clarice Dillard. However, we were not surprised to know that she was the patient, for we remembered that in 1948 she was seldom well while at Mary Potter.

We dropped another cone and saw a picture in Nashville, Tennessee. There we saw Katie McQueen, Mildred Means, Ruth Morton, Hilda Fisher, Gwendolyn Lawrence and Annie Wilkins all social workers, improving the conditions of the people in slum sections of that city.

As the next cone began to burn, we noticed ourselves in an office full of men; Thomas Davis, Samuel Epps, Hugh Fears, Ellis Ragland, John Cobb, Paul Lee, Gustave Caution, at that time a prominent electrician, Tucker Harris, and Lawrence Collins. George Green sat behind a desk looking very wise, and otherwise. On the door in big letters was written "Matrimonial Agency" conducted by George Greene, "Expert in Handling Love Affairs." As we watched, Erma Clements rushed in. She grabbed one of Greene's application blanks and filled it out as follows: Name, Erma Clements; Occupation, Stenographer to Andrew Rogers; In love? Yes; With whom? Employer; Does he love you? Cannot tell and it does not matter. That was enough for us.

Slowly the fire died out. The old African ceased his incantations and we sighed as we turned away, our minds and hearts full of memories of Mary Potter and 1948.

The Y-Teens are the Junior Members of the Y. W. C. A. and are girls who wish to share in this great world organization. These girls are from the Junior and Senior Classes who have pledged their loyalty to help build fellowship, to grow in knowledge, and the love of God and share His love with all people.

The triangle symbolizes development of Character, Mind and Physique through a constructive program of work, play, fellowship and worship.

In all activities the Y-Teens strive to light the ways to:

BETTER CHARACTER

BETTER CITIZENSHIP
